Talk with the Pastor
May 31, 2008

WATCH THE CHILDREN

Do you sometimes feel that you have gotten stuck in a rut and everything is a meaningless routine? You get bored going through the motions. It's like you have come to a dead end in your career and you have nothing to look forward to. You have lost all zest for living.

Joseph J. Mazzella gives a suggestion in the following material. He says that watching little children play and enjoy their simple, uncluttered lives gives us a perspective on life that is seen through the eyes of hope, wonder and simplicity.

"Each day just before I pick up my boy I take in this glorious and happy sight of the preschool children having one last recess before they go home. Many of the parents are there as well smiling as they watch that special joy that their children are creating. I look on as one happy boy swings and calls out for his teacher to watch. I see two smiling girls skip, laugh and gather handfuls of dandelions to give their moms. I watch as two boys ride the rocking horses with all the energy and delight that their little hearts can muster. I smile upon seeing a girl hanging upside down from the miniature monkey bars and giggling at the whole world. As I get my own son he too runs for the swing set for one last ride as well before we head home. He may have the body of a 12 year old, but he still has the bliss of a child's heart, mind, and soul.

These beautiful children remind me everyday that life truly is about joy, laughter, and love. Anything else is just details. We may all have to go to our jobs, clean our homes, raise our families, and take care of all the tasks in life. Still, there is no reason we can't do all these things with love, laughter, and joy. In fact the only thing we should take seriously in this life is the love and joy that we choose and share. It is what makes life worth living and it is God's greatest gift to us all. Cherish that gift then. Rejoice in it. Share it with the world. And if you don't think you can remember how to, then stop by a playground one day and watch the children."

Jesus Himself says "... Unless you are converted and become as little children, you will by no means enter the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 18:3. The simplicity, humility and confiding trust of a little children are characteristic traits we need to have, without which, we can't enter the Kingdom of heaven.

But we can learn even more from little kids. Their sense of wonder and appreciation of what life offers them each day are things we can learn if only to rediscover that for us and those we care about, life is still worth living.

~~Simeon Rosete, Jr.
